March Meeting

Susan Irish Stewart, presented a very informative talk about how her father, David, turned his love for sailing into a career. Starting with a small marina in Harbor Springs, he was able to expand the business over his lifetime into one of the largest private boating facilities in the country, with marina locations in both Harbor and Charlevoix.

Early on, Irish got involved in sailboat racing and then in boat construction. His main interest centered on the NM sailboats, which still race in the area today.

He was also involved in international and Olympic sailboat racing, serving on the boards that maintained racing standards and rules.

Irish's mother was also an avid sailor, well known for her role in the Harbor sailing school; this support of young sailors continues today.
